in U.S.-Israeli relations is brewing over the fate of Colonel Aviem Sella, a prominent Israeli Air Force officer and the man who allegedly recruited Jonathan Jay Pollard to spy on the United States. Last week Colonel Sella, 41, was given a new senior posting, which Israeli officials refuse to disclose but which is said to be the command of the country's second-largest air base. The posting ordinarily is filled by an officer with the rank THE REAL REAL PROPERTY of brigadier general.

Sources in Jerusalem say the timing of Colonel Sella's new assignment was no accident, that his supporters in Israel's military establishment wanted to send a clear signal to him and to other young officers that those who perform delicate tasks for the nation will not be sacrificed and that Colonel Sella's career would not suffer. But the assignment has sent a very different and disturbing signal to U.S. officials, who said they believed they had extracted a firm pledge from Israel in 1985 that it would "call to account" Israelis who had participated in the Pollard spy ring. This pledge was questioned when Colonel Sella was made commander of the Rimon air base in the Negev Desert last year and when Mr. Pollard's chief "handler," Rafi Eitan, a former counterterrorism adviser to the prime minister, was appointed director general of a major chemicals company in Israel.

Washington reacted to Colonel Sella's new posting by sending its top diplomat in Israel - Arthur Hughes, the charge d'affaires who is substituting for Amhassador Thomas R. Pickering, who is on vacation - to meet with Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Mr. Hughes expressed "deep concern" and warned that U.S. Air Force officials would find it impossible to work with Colonel Sella while he is under indictment,

[On Wednesday, the Reagan adnistration again criticized Colonel Sella's posting and said the U.S. government would have no contact with him, United Press International reported from Washington.

"The United States government believes that the promotion or reassignment to a position of major responsibility of any Israeli in-volved in violation of U.S. espionage laws is inconsistent with the spirit of cooperation in which we have wanted to proceed with the government of Israel in the Pollard affair," said a statement read by a State Department spokeswoman.] Mr. Rabin said Tuesday that it was "total nonsense" to claim that

GENEVA - The United States presented Wednesday a counterproposal on medium-range missiles in Europe that a report said would require the Soviet Union to station the 100 warheads allowed under the plan out of range of most of Western Europe and Japan.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting sources in Washington, reported in Wednesday's editions that the U.S. proposal would require Moscow to station the 100 warheads at a single base near Novosibirsk in Siberia.

The U.S. proposal was submitted to Lem Masterkov, the Soviet negotiator for the medium-range talks, by his U.S. counterpart, Maynard G. Glitman, during a 90-minute meeting at the U.S. diplomatic mission. U.S. officials declined to directly JERUSALEM - With sighs of disrespect, a few of his countrymen call the lawyer simply "Sheftel," as io: Sheftel, how can a Jew defend a Nazi?"

Even his mother warns Yoram Sheftel about his decision to assist in representing John Demjanjuk, the retired autoworker from the United States who is accused of being the infamous executioner of the Treblinka death camp in Poland.

"You'll see," she has told her son. "He'll be convicted, and everyone will say you defended a monster." As he recalls her advice, Mr. Sheftel's face widens into a smile.

"I'm not making decisions in court according to my mother's thinking," he says. "She's been brainwashed like the others about who 'Ivan the Terrible' really is."

Mr. Sheftel, a Tel Aviv criminal lawyer, is the cocounsel, with an American lawyer, in defending Mr. Demjanjuk, a 66-year-old Ukrainian-born refugee who denies he is the Treblinka killer whom immates called Ivan the Terrible.

As a fervent Zionist who has fought in all of Israel's wars of the last 20 years, the 38-year-old Mr. Sheftel

French Evidence Is Said

To Tie 2 Terror Groups

Adolf Eichmann 26 years ago, hinges narrowly on the question of fair identification by witnesses.

Proper identification of defendants is Mr. Sheftel's forte, he says proudly.

"This is the entire case, nothing else," Mr. Sheftel said, referring to the approaching issue of what weight to give two photo identity cards that are decades old. The killing of millions of Jews in World War II can never be disputed, nor can the existence of Treblinka and Ivan the Terrible, says the lawyer, who lost relatives in the Nazi campaign. But he emphasizes that the simple question of identity makes this trial a matter not of history but of the Isracli court's fairness of technique.

"If the court goes by the book, we have a good chance at acquittal," said Mr. Sheftel, who has already angered the tribunal by urging it not to be carried away by a prosecution attempt at a "show trial." "The identification process - the way the photos were arranged and presented to the Treblinka survivors - violated the basic legal standards of identification," he asserted. This central argument has already been disputed by if he did."

seems unlazed by comments on his Jewishness. He remains convinced that this case, unlike the trial of Adolf Eichmann 26 years ago, hinges narrowly on the one of the photos is on a Nazi identification card bearing the defendant's original name, Ivan Demjanjuk, and vital statistics.

The prosecution also has the powerful testimony of survivors who have identified Mr. Demjanjuk in court. But the defense gently contends that these identifications were a result of wishful thinking combined with a questionable identification process.

Mr. Sheltel will pursue the issue once the chief defense counsel, Mark O'Connor of Bulfalo, New York, steps aside for what will be a considerable change of pace io the trial. The focus will shift from the history of Treblinka to questions about a handful of photographs that were arranged in two folders for the survivors to view.

Mr. Sheftel cited two other factors in his willingness to defend Mr. Demjanjuk. The first is the "smell," as he put it, the intuitive judgment he always makes about whether a potential client is guilty.

"I can be wrong, but John Demjanjuk does not bave this smell," Mr. Sheftel said. "I would not defend him

The other factor, he said, is his anger that this is only the second war crimes trial conducted by the Israelis across the decades.

He feels Israel should have ignored international opinion and kidnapped other undisputed Nazis such as Eichmann from their postwar refuges. To be fair, a law must be evenly applied, said Mr. Sheftel. Lately, Mr. O'Connor has been pursuing elaborate cross examination of Treblinka survivors who have testified about the killing of 870,000 Polish Jews. Mr. Sheftel waits, barely able to contain his energies. A namrally combative advocate, he has several times been told by the tribunal to sit down and stop micrupting.

Two survivors of the Nazi crimes have stood and denounced Mr. Sheftel from the audience at the trial, and he was stong when one quoted the Talmud: "A messenger of a person is the same as the person himself. But every Jew is entitled to his fervor, the lawyer said. And for him, the "great Zionist lesson" to never forsake Israel is the tragic history of his Aunt Faiga. She migrated to Palestine 60 years ago, grew unhappy and returned to Europe a week before Hitler's invasion of Poland, where she perished.

Reagan Denies Wife Is 'Dragon Lady

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ronald Reagan, in an outburs during a White House photo session on Wednesday, defended his wife against newspaper assertions that she deposed Donald T. Regan, the White House chief of staff.

The president complained of reports that Nancy Reagan was involved in government decisions "and so forth and all this, being a kind of dragon lady." adding: "There's nothing to that. And no one who knew her well would ever say that. That is fiction and I think it's despicable."

Mr. Reagan said his wife had no role in the dismissal of Mr. Regan. He said that Mr. Regan had a "letter of resignation dated October," but decided to wait until the Tower commission report, which charged Mr. Regan with being responsible for "chaos" in the White House after the Iran arms affair was disclosed.

Mr. Zhao stressed to the British chairman of the Swire group of companies, John Swire, that the prosperity of Hong Kong after 1997 would depend mainly on the private rather than the public sector, the Xinhua press agency reported. The group's interests in Hong Kong include property and an airline. The prime minister also assured Mr. Swire that the so-called basic law now being drafted for Hong Kong would include present legislation in the colony. "The future basic law will embody this," Mr. Zhao was quoted as saying. Mr. Swire stressed that the retention of present laws was an essential element contributing to the confidence of Hong Kong's inhabitants, the agency said.

Rabin Said to Oppose Fighter Project

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin is convinced Israel should cancel plans to build the Lavi jet fighter, The Jerusalem Post reported Wednesday.

The newspaper, quoting sources in the government, said Mr. Rabin told a group of senior military officers recently that producing the aircraft would be too costly for the country, which depends heavily on U.S. aid. The report said studies determined that building the plane, including research and development, will cost $13.8 billion, $4.4 billion above a ceiling set by the government.

If Israel decides against building the Lavi, it will have to pay $400 million to U.S. companies to compensate for breaches of contracts, officials said. Opponents of the project said the United States has pledged to cover such costs.

France vs. Inflation

Just when France is being lauded internationally for reducing inflation, observers wonder if the wage-price spiral is starting anew. Performance has shifted from poor to good, from a 10 percent rise a few years ago to something like 2 percent today. This was helped by extraneous elements such as falling import prices, but lower wage pressure played an important role. The problem for France is that prices have recently accelerated again, despite evidence that the economy is slowing down and that unemployment is doomed to go up further.

Governments usually try to shrug off had news, repeating optimistic forecasts that are no longer supported by events. To us credit, France's government admits that prospects, never brilliant, bave turned mediocre. There is much to be said for frankness when the immediate prospects are disappointing. Labor, management and the consuming public are more likely to behave like adults if treated as such Jacques Chirac's government has paid its public the compliment of admitting poorer prospects, while saying that it will not be seduced into incuics that could set inflation off again.

The distinctions may seem line. France does not have to fear a vertical takeoff of the price trend - any more than the United States, where the January performance was similarly disappointing. But it is the direction that counts. The great unknown is what bappens when the rate of price increase stops falling and threatens to accelerate. It is a problem that confronts all the traditionally inflationprone countries, not simply France. If the price trend changes for the worse, temporarily and for quite special reasons, does this have to entail a new vicious circle. where a one-off price rise engenders powerful claims for higher money incomes? Many industrialized countries may face a crucial test if 1987 sees the price barometer veering from fair to changeable.

The outcome depends on expectations. The austerity of recent years may make organized labor cautious, accepting temporary losses of real income when prices rise but jobs are scarce; management may be less intent on pushing up prices a split second after costs rise. But this is supposition, and many governments would be illadvised to put it to the test. The last thing our world needs, while trying to induce noninflationary West Germany and Japan to be more expansionary, is a new upsurge of inflation elsewhere.

Romantics, and some economists, advocate incomes policies to enable governments to retrain prices and wages by statute or persuasion rather than by unemployment. This has seldom worked. The result is usually a new wage and price explosion after a short period of restraint. Not only do governments have to keep the growth of income less than people think they can obtain by bargaining, they have to discriminate between skilled and unskilled workers to prevent essential wage differentials from shrinking, and they are ill-equipped for this. They have to depend, bowever reluctantly, on control of demand and encouragement of competition. This is why the Chirac government's present attitude seems right. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

Cynically Into Beirut

If the extreme step Syria has taken by sending troops and armor into Beirut will not bring a peace of the gun, then what will? The rest of Lebanon to the east and north has been cantonized or occupied by Syrian troops. Only Moslem West Beirut (East Beirut is already tucked into a Christian canton) and its hinterland reaching toward Israel are still up for grabs. That is where the terrible things go on that fill the news.

The Christians invited the Syrians to police Lebanon's civil war in 1976, but the Syrians were not really able to tame Beirut. The Israelis expelled them from the city in 1982, leaving the vacuum that the prevail-ing anarchy filled. Now the Syrians are back, drawn in apparently to save their sinking clients, the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, from PLO-Sunni-Communist attack.

To make the show of bloodiness that seems a part of being taken seriously in Beirut, the Syrians murdered some 20 Hezbollah fighters they had taken prisoner. Hezbollah is the radical Shiite group associated with Iran that is widely held responsible for the kidnappings of foreigners m Lebanon and that has tried with the PLO to brush aside Amal in southern Lebanon and open a new front against Israel. That the Syrians confront the protégés of their Iranian friends is a sign that they mean business, What next? Beirut is never more than a car bomb away from fresb upheaval. Patrolling the streets need not translate into disarming and breaking up the militias. There is little evidence that Syria has the disinterest or skill to broker differences among the Lebanese, although the roln beckons. The Moslem prime minister asked the Syrians into Beirul; the president pronounced the entry unconstitutional.

Syria's recent involvement with terrorism makes it unlikely that it will win applause from the West for taking on the dirty, thankless job of policing Beirut. Still, any step that promises a pause in the bloodletting — and perhaps a new opportunity to reclaim hostages — has to be welcomed. It - and perhaps a new opportunity to is the convenience of Syria and Israel, however, that is first being served.

The Israelis kicked the Syrians out of Beirut. Now, in a reversal, they accept their return. Both are cynically using Amal to contain the PLO of Yasser Arafat, who is in a state of war with Israel on the one hand and defies Syria's authority on the other. But let there be no easy rejoicing that the PLO is in a Syrian-Israeli squeeze. An interloper in Lebanon, it will make trouble there

Economic Reform Through Arms Control

N recent years, inflexibility in foreign policy has served the Communist Party's interest within the Soviet Union no better than domestic repres-sion. It has committed the state to levels of defense spending that its economic performance can scarcely bear and which, by its seeking to compete at every level with the United States, now threaten even greater hardship. In that sense, Soviet efforts to achieve mutual arms control may be judged genuine.

Strategy Against AIDS

eavesdrop on a meeting convened by the federal Centers for Disease Control. What drew the crowds were suggestions that the agency was preparing to advocate manda-mry testing for the AIDS virus, which bomosexual groups intensely oppose. Public health officials have almost no weapons with which to combat the deadly disease other than the AIDS annibody test, and the agency wanted to hear their views on how the test might best be used. Despite disruptions, the tension between the two groups gradually ebbed. The health officials made clear that they want wider voluntary use of the test but are almost unanimously opposed to mandatary testing.

From the Atlanta meeting emerged a new public bealth strategy against AIDS, but one that requires the Reagan administration to reverse course and provide the necessary legal framework.

· Mandatory testing. With no cure or vaccine for AIDS, the only way to prevent spread of the virus is to persuade people to change behavior. The test for the antibody to the AIDS virus has proved effective in screening blood donations. Why not make the test mandatory at hospitals and venereal disease clinics so that carriers can be identified and encouraged not to spread it? Because mandatory testing would frighten away those who most need to be reached. Unless confidentiality and freedom from discrimination can be better assured, those who test positive have reason to fear loss of housing, jobs, and health insurance. Hardly a single public health official at the conference favored mandatory testing.

· Volumary testing and counseling, Almost all the authorities favor encouraging more people to take the test voluntarily, provided that it is purely an adjunct to counseling. Counseling, both before and Homosexual rights groups and television after the test, is what seems most likely lo crews streamed into Atlanta last week to make people avoid high-risk behaviors. That is the rationale behind the state of New York's large new expansion of voluntary counseling and testing. Broad-based testing. Is it worth encouraging voluntary testing for everyone? Probably not: screening the 37 million people admitted to hospitals in the United States each year would not be cost-effective. The 1.5 million Americans now estimated to carry the virus are predominantly homosexuals and intravenous drug addicts. Testing should be routinely offered, and informed consent obtained, at venereal disease clinics and drug treatment centers. Many health officers now consider it worthwhile to trace and offer counseling to the sexual partners of those who test positive.

Wider counseling and testing could save many lives. But it has little chance of being fully effective without firmer assurances of confidentiality and guarantees against discrimination. State laws that provide such protections are not always enforced. Instead of setting an example, the Justice Department last June denied AIDS carriers the protection of the law that shields the handicapped from discrimination. It ruled that a federal employer could cite fear of AIDS as a reason for dismissal. By repudiating that opinion, the administration would help create the framework for public health officials to make most effective use of counseling and testing.

A vigorous public education program should be the second part of its strategy. Third, and equally important, drug addicts seeking demxification need to get treatment immediately and not after the wait of months, even years, that they now face in New York and elsewhere. An administration that pursued these goals could be said to be taking the AIDS epidemic seriously. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

range missiles in an attack on Europe only. Washington might not be willing to respond with its strategic mises directly on the Soviet Union; but NATO could respond, it was argued, with missiles based in Europe.

A Soviet missile attack on Europe, however, would hit U.S. forces just as surely as a conventional attack, thus triggering a certain U.S. response. America, moreover, is not more likely to respond with intermediate-range missiles from Europe than with intercontinental ballistic missiles.

That is not just because the Pershing-2s and cruise missiles can reach into the Soviet Union itself and, if used, certainly would cause a Soviet response against the United States just as would an ICBM attack. It is

Diplomacy on the Cheap Is No Saving

TONDON - In July 1981. as a businessman turned ambassador, I brought with me to the world of diplomacy the notion that the people's business was one like any other. There would be inevitable gains and losses, but if the purpose was useful and adequately funded the end product would be worthwhile. Unfortunately, the shortsighted budget restrictions currently being imposed by Congress on America's diplomatic service are forcing me to revise that view.

Although most Americans accept the need for a strong U.S. defense effort, Congress is, in effect, undermining what is really the first and most cost-effective line of defense - the practice of diplomacy.

'The Most Urgent Foreign Policy Crisis'

T HE foreign policy crises we budget cuts are likely to cost us confront are usually thrust much more - in money, jobs, even upon us by others. Now we are in danger of creating a major one for ourselves by slashing the foreign affairs budget. This looming crisis is the most urgent and least recog-nized of all those facing this nation. As we face the third consecutive year of congressional cuts in the foreign affairs budget, we must understand the real world impact. Those cuts threaten our vital interests, pot just in one or two regions but around the globe. They threaten the stability of our allies. They threaten our war on drug traffickers and on terrorists. They threaten our efforts to promote democratic val-ues and reforms. They threaten our ability to understand and to influence developments in a dynamic international environment. terms. He can bardly reject them now

The message is positive, optimistic, can-do. It is downright patriotic. There are old newsreels of the half million mothers and housewives who took to the streets in 1961 and helped bring about a test ban then. Representative Patricia Schroeder, the Colorado Democrat, gives us contemporary "little guys" specific and compelling advice on how to do it again: "The first thing you can do is to invest in a postage stamp. Now, that is not too big an investment Half the people of the world go to bed at night wishing they had your power. You've got it." The 28 minutes are up. I have seen some dark shots of cone-shaped missiles, and a mushroom cloud or two. But no burning flesh and no screaming babies. I am not depressed. I am concrued, but not frightened. Most of all, I am bopeful, buoyant even. Have the arms control activists finally developed an emotionally palatable message? Have they finally put their finger on a stunningly simple strategy — the test ban — for eading nuclear proliferation? And are they finally going to spare us the trauma of nuclear Armageddon on film? "There's a standing joke among my colleagues that what we really need to do is put a freeze on nuclear war films. They're always about the threat, the threat, the threat, but never about what we can do," Mr. Krane says. "This film is saying that the country does have a tremendous capacity for waking up and turning around. People just need to realize that democracy can work."

There is evidence, however, that Mikhail Gorbachey has told Mr. Castro that Moscow's own needs make its impossible to increase the amount no matter how badly strapped Cuba is. The two leaders are said to get on well personally. All the same, the Cuban press is highly selective and spare in telling its public about Soviet reform efforts. Only the parts about elliciency and tightening up are be-ing copied in Cuba. Still, top people here claim total confidence that they can rely indefinitely on getting what they really need from Moscow as a "matter of honor, morals and socialist solidarity." It is not an easy line to take for proud nationalists who have to try to explain at the same time why Mr. Castro is taking an opposite tack from Mr. Gorbachev on how to improve production.

Some officials admit that development will necessarily slow from planned goals. Investments will have to be cut. They resort to homilies about Lenin's faith in developing the Soviet Union, although they neglect to mention the Soviets' vast resources, which have nonetheless failed to propel it to prosperity.

There are many strange contradictions here, and the only way to explain them seems to be in Mr. Castro's own convictions, hopes and disappointments. He is totally in command. "He owns the country and he owns the revolution," said one sympathetic observer, "and he's trying to make it live op to his dreams." But it does not. He is still energetic, fit, quixotic. Nobody challenges him on anything. He is still a hero at home and a symbol, a man who made the world and particularly, the United States sit up and take notice.

What will remain when he goes is bard to foresee. It depends on the rest of the world as well as on Havana. Left to itself, Cube is not faring well. America has nothing to gain by de-monizing Mr. Castro and his regime. The New York Times.

PARIS - [A Herald editorial says:] "Order has been restored in the Chinese capital under martial law. Yuan-Shih-Kai, however, is in sore need of money to pay the soldiers, and history is filled with disasters resulting from distatisfied armies. The Herald's Peking Bureau reports a conference held [on March 4] by the Ministers of the four Powers whose banking groups had engaged to make a loan but now hesitate to pay over the money unless responsibility is assumed by their respective Governments. Refusal of the funds might result in conditions that would render it permany for the trees to intervene at great expense. Fear of intervention has impelled the Nanking committee to urge their colleagues of the southern assembly to agree that Yuan shall be inaugurated as president at once in Peking."

1937: U.S. Neutrality PARIS - Out of the neutrality debate in the United States there has now emerged a definitive bill, passed [on March 3] by the Senate with a near unanimity which makes its en-actment probable. It seeks to combine the "mandatory" embargo on arms and on lending with a "discretionary" cash-and-carry plan for the articles of general commerce. Whenever a foreign war breaks out the President must proclaim the fact; in ... the case of a civil war he is given more latitude, but is to issue a similar pro-clamation if he finds that necessary to avoid call garing "the peace of the United States" Thereafter, bit etther case, the export of arms to belligerents or to neutrals for transhipment is embargoed. It also becomes, unlawful to buy or trade in new socu-rities (save short-term commercial paper) of a belligerent government."

Ronald Reagan will undoubtedly ac-cept that responsibility now and try to restore his credibility, but this is a time for clear thinking and plain speaking. He has lost the confidence of Congress and this will not be restored by confessing error and promising to "take charge" in his last two years. The situation is too serious for that. In fact, under a parliamentary system, Mr. Reagan would lose a vote of confidence, and America would now be facing an election.

. So changes will have to be made. Yet Mr. Reagan is not now and never has been a "take charge" guy. To expect him suddenly to be a "strong president," in command of the intricate negotiations that he before him, would be unreasonable and probably unwise. He may change his tune and change his team, but he is not likely, in his 77th year, to change his casual ways of doing things. Besides, Congress would not follow him if he tried. He is coming to the end of six years in the White House with the largest annual budget deficit and trade deficit in the history of the republic. The United States is now buying more agricultural products abroad than it is selling, and its national debt is now not only larger than any other nation's today but greater than the debts of all other American presidents combined.

Meanwhile, his conduct or misconduct of foreign policy with the Russians and in Central America and the Middle East has divided Congress and confused the alliance. He never really persuaded Congress with his ideological supply-

Let Him Be Reagan

WASHINGTON has been seized with the notion that Ronald Reagan should suddenly become a hands-on president. That is a terrifying prospect. Fortunately, nothing is likely to come of it. If Mr. Reagan were capable of man-aging even his own household, Don Regan would still be chief of staff.

Those who argue that Mr. Reagan should actually get involved in govern-ing ought to take another look at the issues that truly have engaged him. Supply-side economics, funding the contras and "star wars" are prize exhibits.

Far from waking the Gipper, it is time to do what movement conservatives have been yelling for: Let Reagan be Reagan - which means rousing occa-sionally to deliver speeches with believable unction and to preside with regal splendor over ribbon-cuttings, state dinners and awards ceremonies."

- Syndicated columnist Jim Fain.

Living Abroad

WASHINGTON - Ed Muskie side economics at home, or his "star wars" nuclear policy abroad, but blinded the people and intimidated Congress with the magic of his personal popularity, which he has now lost in Iran.

He lost it not because he delegated his authority but because be delegated it to the wrong people, and did not keep his oath of office to see that the laws were faithfully executed. This difficulty he can still repair, although the time is short. He retains the power of appointment, which he has abused for six long years, but he seems to have learned a esson in the recent crash. By choosing Howard Baker of Tennessee as White House chief of staff, then withdrawing his nomination of Robert Gates as the CIA director and naming William Webster instead, he has recognized that he has no time for more unnecessary controversies with Con-gress. But he still has a long way to go.

He could begin by putting his own house in order, since nobody elected Nancy. It would also be useful if he resolved the disputes in his own cabinet over the control of nuclear weapons; he has made a start by welcoming Mikhail Gorbachev's offer on intermediaterange missiles and instructing the Geneva negotiators to present a draft treaty in response. This will require a new approach to Congress, which must ratify hatever agreement is reached.

It is too late to keep his promise to balance the budget, but so many un-imaginable things have happened re-cently that it still may be possible to achieve a new balance of power. This is the presiding problem of world politics and may still be within his reach.

Franklin Roosevelt faced a similar situation near the end of World War II. Mindful of the defeat of the League of Nations at the end of World War f, he brought Republican leaders into negotiations with the Senate to discuss postwar problems and establish the United Nations. By such foresight, he avoided Woodrow Wilson's tragic battles with the Senate. It was Roosevelt's final achievement before he died.

Mr. Reagan, despite all his recent troubles, might still do the same. There are many problems still to be resolved in the nuclear field, but this is not a partisan issue with the new Democratic leaders in the House and Senate.

In Sam Nunn of Georgia, for example, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the president has a knowledgeable ally in this field, and there are many others like him who would help negotiate and ratify a treaty before Mr. Resgan retires. Only the president, however, can resolve the dif-terences within his cabinet and produce the bipartisan policy he says he wants. Senator Nunn and the others cannot help him unless they are invited. . The Singapore govern-ment supports a free press and believes that it is an essential institution in a functioning democracy. It does not seek to control or censor the press. It does not want a press which is unquestioning. servile and sterile. In order for Singapore to progress, it must have access to information from all sources.

The facts speak for themselves: 3,700 foreign publications circulate in Singapore; 93 foreign journalists, representing 63 foreign news organizations, are based there. Besides The Asian Wall Street Journal, other newspapers and magazines which are freely available Singapore include the International Herald Tribune, The Economist, USA Today and Newsweek. The government has also allowed the British Broadcasting Corporation to have a relay station in Singapore which rebroadcasts BBC World Service programs to listeners in Singapore and throughout the region. In international forums, Singapore has not joined the radicals from the Third World to attack the Western media. It has worked with likeminded countries to prevent the Soviet Union and its Third World allies from exploiting legitimate grievances of the developing countries against the Western media. No newspaper has an automatic right to circulate in another country. Circula-tion is a privilege extended by the host country. Foreign publications which en-joy this privilege in Singapore are ex-

Recent actions by the Singapore gov- pected to comply with the views of the The first issue is whether freedom of the press is an absolute value. Many journalists in America hold the view that freedom of the press is an absolute right which is not to be subordinated to or moderated by other considerations. We believe that journalists, like everyone else, must operate within the laws of the land, such as laws regarding defamation, sedition, contempt of court and the protection of official secrets. Singapore is a young republic of only 21 years. Its population is made up of many different races, religions and languages. It is situ-ated in a part of the world in which these are highly emotional issues. For these reasons, journalists are expected to refram from stirring up emotions on race, religion and language which in the past have led to riots and murder.

The second issue is directly related to Singapore's disputes with Time and The Asian Wall Street Journal. In the Asian edition of its Sept. 8 issue, Time published an article on Singapore which contained what the Singapore govern-ment considered several important errors of fact. A representative of the government repeatedly wrote to Time requesting that it publish his corrections of these errors. Time refused to publish the letter even though it acknowledged that it might have made errors. Subsequently, Time offered to publish an amended version of the letter which would bowever have altered its sub-stance. Time finally published the letter will be reviewed sometime this year.

The Asian Wall Street Journal, to its issue of last Dec. 12-13, published an article on Singapore's second stock ex-change which, in the government's view, contained grave accusations and errors of fact. A government representative wrote two letters to the Journal to refute the accusations. He requested publication of his letters and any rebuttals the Journal cared to make. Because of the Journal's persistent refusal, the government has restricted its circulation.

We respect the right of foreign publi-cations to publish, within the framework of our laws, anything they wish to say about Singapore. However, we believe that freedom of the press must be a twoway street. It is only fair that a party attacked by a paper be given a right of reply in a form of its choice. To deny us this right is tantamount to giving the press the right to suppress facts and views with which it disagrees. Should the press have the right to censor dissenting views? This is the question which is at issue in Singapore's disputes with Time and The Asian Wall Street Journal. Is it unreasonable to ask the foreign press to practice what it preaches? TOMMY T.B. KOH, Ambassador of Singapore to the United States. Washington,

There remain some minor disabilities. I have resumed my writing and research.

My experience has been cited as an argument against honoring requests of stricken patients to be gently eased out of their pain and life. I cannot agree. There are two main reasons. As an octogenarian, there is a reasonable likelihood that I may suffer another "cardiovascular accident" or worse, f may not even be in a position to ask for the surcease of pain. It seems to me that have already paid my dues to death. Secondly, I dread imposing on my family and friends another grim round of misery similar to the one that my first attack occasioned.

My wife and children endured enough for one lifetime. I know that for them the long days and nights of waiting, the disruption of their professional duties and their own familial responsibilities counted for nothing in their anxiety for me. In their joy at my recovery, these have been forgotten. But to visit another prolonged spell of helpless suffering on them as my life ebbs away, or even worse, if f inger on into a comatose senility, seems altogether gratinious. But what, it may be asked, of the joy and satisfaction of living, of basking in the sunshine, listening to music, watching grandchildren grow into adolescence, following the news about the fate of freedom in a troubled world, playing with ideas, writing one's testament of wisdom and folly for posterity? Is not all that one endured, together with the risk of its recorrence, an acceptable price for the many satisfactions still open even to a person of advanced years?

Apparently those who cling to life no matter what think so. I do not. The zest and intensity of these experiences are no longer what they used to be.

I have always thought that a test of whether one had found bappiness in one's life is whether one would be willing to relive it - whether, if it were possible, one would accept the opportunity to be born again. Having lived a full and relatively happy life, 1 would cheerfully accept the chance to be reborn, but certainly not to be reborn again as an infirm octogenarian.

To some extent, my views reflect what preciate the unwisdom of my request. I have seen happen to the aged and A month later I left the hospital. In six stricken who have been so unfortunate as to survive crippling paralysis. They suffer, and impose suffering on others, unable even to make a request that their torment be ended.

1 am mindful, too, of the burdens placed upon the community, with its rapidly diminishing resources, to provide the adequate and costly services necessary to sustain the lives of those whose days and nights are spent on mattress graves of pain. A better use could be made of these resources to increase the opportunities and qualities of life for the young. I am not denying the moral obligation the community has to look after its disabled and aged. There are times, however, when an individual may find it pointless to insist on the fulfillment of a legal and moral right.

What is required is no great revolu-tion in morals but an enlargement of imagination and an intelligent evaluation of alternative uses of resources,

Long ago, Seneca observed that "the wise man will live as long as he ought, not as long as be can." One can envisage bypothetical circumstances in which one has a duty to prolong one's life despite its costs, for the sake of others, but such circumstances are far removed from the ordinary prospects we are considering. If wisdom is rooted in knowledge of the alternatives of choice, it must be reliably informed of the state one is in and its likely outcome. Scientific medicine is not infallible, but it is the best we have. Should a rational person be willing to endure acute suffering merely on the chance that a miraculous cure might presently he at hand? Each should he permitted to make his own choice, especially when no one else is harmed by it. The responsibility for the decision, whether deemed wise or foolish, must be with the chooser.

Cultural Differences Sway Choice of a Therapist

By Sherry Buchanan International Herald Tribune

LONDON - Expansion Leave anxiety, depression and other emotional problems back in their native countries, and some may fied that the stress of living in a foreign culture magnifies problems. Where counselors and therapists are available to help, a major ques-tion is whether their nationality corresponds to the patient's.

Internationally trained therapists say they can develop a better relationship with a patient if they understand the patient's cultural context. Agreeing with this, many people who have sought help in a foreign country say that having a therapist from another culture can be an added benefit.

"The gnideline in choosing a therapist is who do you imagine understands what your prob-lem is about," said Marie Anne Brun, an American clinical psychologist and psychotherapist who was trained in Paris and has hved there for 18 years.

A popular therapist's position is given by Sudhar Kakar, an Indian psychoanalyst who was trained in West Germany, has taught at Harvard University and practices in New Del-hi. "In therapy, it is essential to understand the person's culture," he said. "The ability to understand the messages given by the patient is essential."

In his private practice, Mr. Kakar treats Indians, West Germans and Americans. But, he said, he treats Americans "with much less comfort" because he believes he has spent too bitle time in the United States to understand its culture fully.

A similar view is furnished by Manfred Kets de Vries, a Dutch psychoanalyst and professor of organizational behavior at the European School of Business Administration in Fontainebleau, France, the leading European business school

"The blank wall of the analyst is a theoretical position," he said. "There is no question that therapists show affection and empathy for their patients." Mr. Kets de Vries was trained in Canada, where he lived for 10 years. "When I had to treat French Canachans I had to learn about the influence of the Catholic Church and what happened in those religious schools," he re-happened in those religious schools, he retreat French Canadians I had to learn about the

For example, the Community Help Center in Brussels, an English-speaking counseling ser-

Americans in distress, will pay for a limited number of sessions with the International Counseling Services in a crisis situation. U.S. embassies and consulates often can provide a list of English-speaking or American therapists. "If you're away from bome, to be able to speak to someone in your own language is a great comfort," said Meg Fassam, the British administrator of the Community Help Center, who has been in Brussels for four years.

There is an easier identification and understanding between the therapist and the patient if they are of the same nationality or culture," agreed David Salier, an American psychoanalyst who was trained in France at Université de Paris VIL "But you also have to maintain an objectivity which may he easier when you are not familiar with that person's culture."

A study among British patients seeing Amer-ican therapists has been completed by Dr. Morton Shatzman, an American psychiatrist who has been practicing in London for 20 years. The study showed that, for some, the difference in nationality had a bad effect on the relationship between patient and therapist, while for others it had a positive effect.

"Seeing an American therapist meant to me freedom," said a British patient, "as I'd felt myself to be a constricted and constrained person. There was more chance of contact be-tween two people without a whole lot of con-cepts of where we'd come from in our backgrounds, without preconceived notions of behavior.

That we had less knowledge about each other could have been construed as a drawback or difficulty, but I feel that it was a good thing." To others, what mainly matters is getting the right treatment at the right time.

"Frankly I was so out of it I wouldn't have cared what nationality you were," one of Dr. Shatzman's British patients told him.

According to therapists who specialize in addiction problems, the treatment against alcoholism and drug abuse does not depend on nationality.

"Treating for addiction is cross-cultural," said John Ditzeler, an American clinical psychologist who was trained to Minnesota and who now runs Farm Place with his wife in Oakley, Surrey. "People's problems are fairly similar when they are using the same chemical."

In addition, the officers said, they have seen evidence that insurgents in Colombia, who are already extorting protection money from drug traffickers, have gone ioto the drug business themselves to help finance paramilitary and terrorist operations.

The officers also expressed concern that leftist groups in Honduras, prodded by the Sandinist govcroment in Nicaragua, would mount isolated attacks on U.S. troops deployed there for training. In one case, they said, American officers discovered a Honduran mapping a U.S. military installa-

By Shirley Christian New York Times Service BUENOS AIRES - The head of the Argentine Navy has publicly pledged the navy's loyalty to the government of President Raul Alfonsin after a week of tension over whether navy officers on active duty are to be tried for human rights aboses.

But Vice Admiral Ramon Antonio Arosa, the navy chief of staff, said Toesday that the navy would defend those accused. He also complained that the navy was being unjustly criticized by people who did not recognize the legitimacy of the military's campaign against leftist guerrillas in the 1970s.

The "epilogue" of that campaign, be declared, was the democracy under which Argentina lives today, which he said was "possible because of the defeat of those who wanted to create chaos in order to bring oppression.

At least 9,000 Argentines died and many more were tortured or imprisoned without trial in the armed forces' effort to destroy two urban guerrilla groups. As a result of those abuses, judicial proceed-* ings were begun after the Alfonsin government took office at the end of 1983, with attention directed. first at the retired generals and admirals who had led the military and government during the so-called "dirty war." Ten top military men have been convicted, including two former presidents of Argentina.

But in December, Congress set a deadline of Feb. 22 for filing charges for abuses committed in that era, and the result was a flurry of last-minute filings by prosecutors, human rights groups and relatives of victims. Military officials said this week that about 190 military officers were issued summonses by courts take place toward the end of 1987, before the deadline. Several dozen the said that Mr. Gorbachev are on active duty, usually with the rank of colonel or lower.

The armed forces has argued that those men, who were of lower rank during the time in question, were generally following orders and that if they exceeded orders they should be judged by the military, not civilian courts.

The first test of whether activeduty officers would, in fact, appear before the civilian courts for questioning and possible charging occurred last week to a case involving the alleged operation of a torture and detention center at the Naval Mechanics School huge planets. Astronomers have long known that the vast majority of the mass of the universe seems to be "mussing," invisible to the most powerful telescopes exist, given the powerful gravitational pulls observed at work in clusters of stars and galaxies.

Writing in The Astronomical Journal, Dr. Jack Hills of Los Alamos said that the "missing mass" needed to hold the Milky Way in a flat spiral of 400 billion stars is not made up of dust, elementary particles, or interstellar snowballs — all put forward at one time or another. The prime candidates, he said, are objects no smaller than asteroids dozens of miles in diameter and no larger than 7 percent of the mass of the sun. Dr. Hills favors huge planets no smaller than Jupiter, whose mass is .1 percent that of the sun. "The most likely missing-mass candidates are objects called gray dwarfs," he said. "They can be viewed as oversized planets or stars that never ignited."

Airborne Pollutants Threaten Lakes

WASHINGTON (NYT) -- Toxic substances borne by air are increasingly and dangerously contaminating the Great Lakes, according to a report issued by environmental groups.

The report varued that poisonous chemicals and metals carried by the wind and deposited on the surface of the lakes are accumulating in fish and other aquatic life and entering the food chain. These poisons include substances such as the insecticide DDT and polychlorinated biphenyls or PCBs, which are banned in the United States but are carried to the lakes from as far away as South America.

The report was made public by the Sierra Club and Great Lakes United, which includes sportsmen, labor, and husiness leaders in its ranks as well as environmentalists. It charges that the United States and Canada are failing to carry out a bilateral agreement, originally reached in 1972, to protect the lakes.

Bacterium Points to Ulcer Cure

ATLANTA (AP) - A bacterium recently discovered in people suffering from peptic ulcers and chronic indigestion suggests there may be a cure for the ailments, says a report released at a meeting of the Aohaccan Society for Microbiology. The bacterium, Campylobacter pyloridis, was found in patients with gastritis and peptic ulcers hut was rarely found in patients without the inflammations, reported Dr. George E. Buck. "Many might suffer from inflammation of the lining of the stomach, perhaps caused by this new germ," said Dr. Barry Marshall. The cause of ulcers still is unknown.

Screening Urged for Sperm Donors WASHINGTON (WP) — The first documented case of hepatitis B transmitted through artificial insemination has prompted health officials to urge that all sperm donors be screened for the liver ailment.

A 37-year-old Colorado woman developed acute viral hepatitis B in 1982 several months after being artificially inseminated with sperm from an anonymous donor. Later it was discovered that the donor semen contained the hepatitis B virus. The woman recovered fully after three weeks in the hospital, Potential transmission of hepatitis B through semen is well known, but infection through artificial insemination had been theoretical until the Colorado case, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported. Though the incidence of hepatitis B in semen donors probably is less than 1 percent, the JAMA report said, routine screening of donors could climinate even that small risk.

Tailor-Made Poultry May Be Possible:

Post-Infection Risk Rises By Lawrence K. Altman

New York Times Service

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Analysis of blood and data col-lected in San Francisco since 1978 suggests that the risk of developing AIDS increases yearly after infection with the virus, dampening hopes that rates of illness might platean or even drop live years or so after infection infection.

In fact, the findings have led officials to conclude tentatively that the percentage of infected people who develop AIDS rises steadily over the seven years after infection.

The study, prepared by the San Francisco Health Department and the federal Centers for Disease Controi in Atlanta, indicates that only 4 percent of people who become infected with the AIDS virus will develop the disease within three years but that after five years the figure rises to 14 percent and after seven years to 36 percent.

The longer one is infected, the higher are the chances of developing AIDS," said Dr. George Rutherford of the San Francisco Health Department.

Dr. Harold S. Jaffe, an AIDS epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control who is working on the study with the San Francisco Health Department, said the researchers had been unable to identify any factor other than time that triggers the onset of the disease. "There doesn't seem to be anything obvious that people can do to stop this disease progression," Dr.

Jaffe said.

The findings, which are scheduled to be presented this year at conferences on AIDS, are believed to provide the longest perspective on the progression of AIDS. Jaffe said the lew studies conducted on other groups had covered shorter periods of time, but their results "look more or less the same - it's in the same

The study is rooted in another study, of 6,700 ballpark," he said. homosexual and bisexual men who visited San Francisco Health Department venereal disease clinics and who agreed to participate in a study of hepatitis B and who agreed to participate and study of acpaults b and other infections unusually prevalent among homosexother infections unusually prevalent allocate deficiency syndrome ual men. study would be unusually valuable in the fight against the fatal disease of the immune system.

The researchers studied a group of 104 men selected from the 6,700, determining when infection with the AIDS virus occurred and when the onset of disease began. The researchers have confidence in the results because they used a standard statistical analysis to take account of the small size of the sample and snbgroups within it as well as other variables that could have skewed the findings.

The subjects were drawn from a group of 359 men who had been selected in 1980 for a trial of a hepatitis B vaccine. Of the 359, 257 gave permission for AIDS tests to be done on their frozen blood samples; the 104 studied were the ones who showed evidence of AIDS infection.

Their blood had not in 1980 shown signs of infection with hepatitis B, which can be spread through sexual activity. The subjects were therefore assumed to be jess sexually active than other San Francisco clinic visitors who have been similarly studied, said Paul M. O'Malley, project director of the San Francisco Department of Health AIDS research study.

Yet the researchers' findings about the onset of AIDS symptoms after infection were not significantly different for the group presumed to be less sexually active. Furthermore, the just completed analysis provides data for a longer period than similar calculations made for the randomly selected group.

The results lend further support to government predictions that the number of cases, now totaling 31,036, will rise sharply in future years. Officials of the United States Public Health Service have estimated that by the end of 1991 270,000 Americans will have contracted AIDS.

Dr. O'Malley said his team hoped to start the first phase of experiments with two drugs, azidothymidine, or AZT, and acyclovir, to determine if they will help prevent people infected with AIDS virus but without any symptoms from developing the disease. The team is awaiting final approval of the experiments from the Food and Drug Administration. AZT has already been approved for experimental use on some classes of AIDS patients.

West Germany has become Europe's number-one clothing manufacturer. "The industry now registers the highest sales for garments in Europe," according to a study by the Commerzbank, the country's third largest commercial bank. Germany is also strong in exports, second only to Italy and ahead of France and Britain.

"Apparently, West German" fashion is highly appreciated abroad, scoring through its superior quality, fashion-conscious creativity and punctual delivery by the manufacturers." noted the Commerzbank's report.

At the same time, Germany is Europe's top clothing importer. In 1985, the last year for which complete statistics are available, Germany imported twice as much as it sold abroad (5.7 hillion deutsche marks,

The main fair is held this year March 8-12 and Sept. 6-10. Collections Premieres provides a first look and orders for coming trends (Aug. 2-4) while IGEDO Dessous presents under- and swimwear (March 8-11 and Sept. 6-9) during the main fair. Munich: For details, see special story on Fashion Week (Mode Woche) in this section. German fashion houses often do not sound German. This is the case with Mondi, the M in the MBS Group, based in Munich, Its sporty, feminine products may be found in extries. Mondi, which also features a complete range of accessories compatible in color and style, is putting the accent on "feminine" in its springsummer collections this year. Its designers have adopted a narrow silhouette reflecting the close-to-the-hody trend and have also been influenced by the movie "Out of Africa" to produce a re-creation of 1920s British colonial style with white, gold and sand colors. Escada, also based in Munich and sold through luxurious stores and boutiques internationally, gives a high priority to design, priding itself on creating global fashions that appeal to all its markets. The product range includes knitwear, dresses, leather clothing and coordinates (in which Escada is a leader) as well as shoes and accessories. The firm has three labels: Escada by Margaretha Ley, the top of the line; Laurel, the coordinates collection for

A German clothing industry leader is Klaus Sreilmann (pronounced style-man) GmbH & Co. KG. located in Bochum-Wattenscheid, in the Ruhr industrial region. Now in its 29th business year, the company has had almost uninterrupted growth despite changing fashions and the pressure of cheap imports. Steilmann has seen the popelin coat, a "pillar" of the company, plunge in popularity but almost simultaneously profit from the new demand for woolen coars. BUSINESS/FINANCE

A Takeover Bid Is One Way To Open Closed-End Funds

By VARTANIC C. VARTAN New York Times Service

EW YORK - Are closed-end investment companies the newest takeover prey? That is what some experts are asking after an unsolicited acquisition offer for the Japan Fund, a closed-end fund that seeks capital gains by investing in Japanese securities.

It is the unusual nature of closed-end funds - their shares typically sell at a discount to net asset value — that apparently prompted the offer from a group including T. Boone Pickens 3d, the son of the Texas entrepreneur T. Boone Pickens. The group said Monday it owned 1.4 million of the Japan Fund's 28 million common shares, and it proposes to pay 95 percent of net asset value, or a immune to forced

percent discount, subject to obtaining satisfactory financing. Prospective buyers also include John S. Grace, presi-dent of Sterling Grace Capital Management Limited Partnership, and Oliver R. Grace Jr., general partner of the Anglo-American Security Fund

Limited Partnership. Closed-end funds have been reorganized or liquidated in the past, and the goal of outsiders essentially is to close the gap between net asset value, or the dollar value of a portfobo divided by the number of fund shares, and the actual market price. If a group is successful, it can reap a profit on its original investment bought in the open market at a discount.

The Japan Fund ended last week at a 19.7 percent discount. but the gap narrowed Monday as the stock rose $1.625 to a 52-week high of $17.375. The price was unchanged Tuesday, and based on a net asset value of $19.83, the discount was 12.4 percent.

On Wall Street, the thinking is that the Grace-Pickens group, rather than wanting a takeover, would like to force the Japan Fund into becoming an open-end investment company, or mutual fund. And the betting, in the words of one professional investor in closed-end funds, is that in this case the outsiders "have less than a 50-50 chance of success." The Japan Fund said Tuesday that its directors would discuss the proposal Friday.

HOMAS J. Herzfeld of South Miami, Florida, who man-ages nearly $100 million for clients in assets of closed-end funds, believes that activity in closed-ends may be heating. up on another front: the single-country funds that went public last year to invest in securities of specific nations. "Outside investors have acquired stakes of more than 5 percent each in the Italy Fund, the France Fund and the Scandinavia Fund." Mr. Herzfeld said. "Each of these funds is selling at a discount, and reorganization has to be regarded as a serious possibility. There's a chance, too, that some raider might come along and pay minority holders a premium for their shares."

But the giants of the closed-end industry, such as Tri-Continental Corp., generally are considered immune to any forced reorganization. Effective control of some funds may reside in the hands of insiders.

A closed-end company has a set number of shares that were issued in an initial offering, and its price, like that of any stock, is determined by supply and demand in the open market. Doubling in size over the past 10 years, the closed-end industry in the United States has grown to include more than 100 funds with assets worth over $16 billion.

But this sum is dwarfed by the mitual fund industry, which saw its total assets, including those of money market funds, swell to a record $766 billion last year.

Mutual funds are known as open-end investment companies because they stand ready to sell new shares to people who pay the net asset value plus any sales charge in the case of "load" funds. When investors sell their shares, the mutual fund redeems these at net asset value. In some cases, an "exit" fee may be tacked on.

Orders Slide 4% In U.S. January Fall Is

Biggest Since '80

WASHINGTON - Orders to U.S. factories fell 4.0 percent in January from the previous month, the largest drop in nearly seven years, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday, The decline, which followed a revised December gain of 1.6 per-cent, seemed to buttress other recent reports that have suggested the U.S. economy may be faltering. The December figure had original-ly been reported as a 1.2 percent

But many economists are playing down the latest round of figures because of distortions in economic activity caused by tax law changes at the beginning of the year. Many categories of spending surged in December as American consumers and businesses sought to take advantage of tax deductions and benefits climinated by the new

January's figure was also skewed by a big 49.7 percent gain in the volatile defense category. Defense orders had fallen 57.7 percent in December. Excluding defense goods, factory orders slipped 5.2 percent in January, the department said. The decline in the overall figure was equal to $8.2 billion. New orders totaled a seasonally adjusted $194.5 billion in January.

The January decline was the largest since a 4.5 percent drop in May 1980. The biggest decrease, 6.7 percent, was in orders for durable goods, those expected to last at least three years. These items, which include cars and large appliances, are more expensive than nondurables, and thus suffered sharply in comparison with December, when orders surged 1.5 percent as consumers rushed to take advantage of sales-tax deductions. Orders for nondurable goods edged down 0.8 percent from December, when they rose 1.7 percent. Orders for nondefense capital equipment fell 17 percent, after increasing 5.7 percent in December. Within major industry categories. orders declines were widepread, the department said. Orders for electrical machinery fell 19.8 percent, after a 9.5 percent increase in December.

Orders for primary metals fell 17.7 percent, after a 12.1 percent December gain, and orders for

"Chrysler will probably have to piggyback on the dealer network of another manufacturer," said Stephen Reitman, an auto industry analyst with the London-based brokerage Phillips & Drew. To develop an exclusive network selling and servicing Chrysler cars alone would take years, he said.

And although many Europe-ans may be familiar with Chrys-ler because of the company's near collapse and subsequent turnaround, observers say that the automaker will have to struggle to re-establish its name in the consumer's mind,

"To start np with a fresh sheet of paper in a congested market is very difficult," Mr. Reitman said. "It's phenomenally expen-sive to build up credibility." Horst Schmitt, Chrysler's Eu-indicate that banks' holdings of securities doubled last year, to $25 billion from $12~billion in 1985. The study said much of this was probably an involuntary accumulation of paper underwritten by the banks that they were unable to sell According to the OECD, $376.1 billion was raised internationally last year in the form of equity, bonds, syndicated bank loans, note issuance facilities and commercial paper. The net total - eliminating double counting and refinancing to replace maturing or more expen-sive debt — was an estimated $252 billinn, up 39 percent from 1985.

Straight bonds, as usual, made up the bulk of the borrowings, 39 percent. But Euro-commercial paper, a market that began only in 1985, moved into second place with 15 percent, while floating-rate notes fell to third place, or 14 per-cent. Syndicated bank loans, the largest source of financings in 1983, accounted for 13 percent of last year's activity.

'An "unprecedented" 91 percent of borrowers came from the 24 OECD member countries, up from 70 percent in 1983.

In a special section on Eastern Europe, whose borrowing has increased in the past two years, the report said it was unlikely that further rises of debt could be sustained

The report predicted a "serious dilemma" for these countries "unless they arrest the crosion of their share of world trade." The East bloc appears "increasingly unable said.

That means that either debt will rise to a level that neither the borrowers nor the market will find acceptable, or East European nations "will be obliged to sacrifice the critical goals of growth and to extend new credits.

The Soviet Union has an estimated gross debt of $36 billion, and a net debt gross debt minus deposits with Western banks - of $24 billion. Bulgaria's net debt is an estimated $3.4 billion.

the Soviet Union will move from being considered a "low-debt country" to a "moderate-debt country" within two years and then "quite possibly" a "high-debt country." the report said.

On Hungary, the report said that markets remain favorable for the time being, but any further rise in debt carries the risk of loss of market confidence." Hungary's net debt, estimated at $12.6 billion, is "close to the maximum that is possible without the risk of financial difficulties."

"East Germany and Czechoslovakia have considerable capacity" to tap markets but "a serious question exists as to whether the authorities would allow debt to rise," the OECD said.

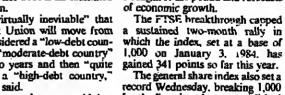

Romania, which has reduced its net debt by a greater proportion than any other East bloc country— from $10 billion in 1981 to $5.4 billion last year - "seems intent on achieving further reductions." Swiss Banks Foresee End Of Boom Despite Profit Rises

ZURICH - Swiss banks made record profits in 1986 but they are warning shareholders that a fiveyear boom in the world economy, which has buoyed their business, may be nearly over.

"To use mountaineering jargon, the climb has become more difficult, the air thinger and dark clouds are visible in the distance, Walter Frehner, chief executive of Swiss Bank Corp., said Wednesday.

The Basel-based bank, Switzerland's second biggest, reported Wednesday that net profit for 1986 rose 11.7 percent to 674 million Swiss francs ($440 million) from 603.4 million francs. But it decided against a dividend increase, leaving the payout at 13 france a share.

Mr. Frehner said assets at the end of December were at a record 137.8 billion francs, 7.7 percent higher than 127.93 billion a year carlier. But, be said, assets would have grown by twice that except for the decline in the dollar.

Swiss Bank's earnings increase was almost exactly in line with those of Union Bank of Switzerland, the country's largest, which reported a 12.2 percent increase, and Credit Suisse, the third largest, with a 12 percent increase. UBS, which is celebrating its 125th anniversary, gave sharehold-ers a 40 franc bonus dividend on top of a basic 120 francs a share. It stressed that the basic dividend was $52, in trading Tuesday on the New the bonus so it would not appear to York Stock Exchange after gaining be financed from running profits.

Credit Suisse raised its dividend by only 1 franc to 107 francs. Bank shares fell in Zurich when the decision was announced on Feb. 19. "We hope that the development of the economy does not further increase the risks of our business," said Credit Suisse's chief executive, Robert Jeker, "I would like to warn about setting expectations too high.'

Share analysts said the revival of the Third World debt crisis, with Brazil's suspension of interest payments to banks and the weaker dollar were among factors that gave the banks some reason for caunon. "Maybe they put the brakes on too early," said Gilbert Puder, head of research at A. Sarasin & Compagnie a private bank based in Ba-sel. "Maybe they did that intennonally to give a sign to the international community."

Swiss Bank Corp. announced Wednesday that it was placing 43,500 bearer shares of Banque Nationale de Paris (Suisse) SA at 2.200 Swiss francs per nominal 400-franc share, the first public issue of the bank, Reuters reported from Zurich. About 7,500 of the shares arise

PARIS - Europeans who buy American automobiles might be offered better warranties than those currently offered by European manufacturers.

And some customers might receive a form of insurance that would protect them if their cars break down far from an authorized service center.

General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp., now engaged in an incentive battle in the United States, are considering offering warranties beyond the standard one-year/unlimited-mileage warranty that comes with most new European cars.

comes with most new European cars. Robert A. Lutz, executive vice president of Chrysler Corp.'s mann-facturing subsidiary, said Monday that the company had not yet determined the length of warranty to be offered when it begins selling cars in Europe later this year. But he predicted it would be "the best or one of the best" warranties in Europe.

Chrysler recently began guaranteeing cars sold in the United States for seven years or 70,000 miles (112,000 kilometers), while GM and

Ford Motor Co. are offering six-year, 60,000-mile warranties. GM currently offers a one-year warranty for European buyers of its American-made cars, but a source within the company said it was "contemplating increasing it."

And Chrysler, aware that European buyers of American cars may fear a breakdown far away from home, is developing a "European-icar a oreactiown far away from none, is developing a "European-wide service plan," according to a company spokesman. "If you happen to be driving in Spain and have a breakdown where there is no Chrysler dealer, we would arrange to have the repairs done," he said.

Although the details have not yet been worked out, the service plan probably would be covered in the sales price.

GM has no such plan. But a sales executive in Antwerp, Belgium emphasized that there were 7,000 Opel dealers in Europe, 120 of them GM dealers.

"In principle, you can go to any Opel dealer who will contact the nearest GM dealer to help you with your problem," he said.

The market shrugged off news of 4.0 percent decline January in U.S. factory orders, the largest onemonth decrease in orders since May 1980. The drop in factory orders was in line with expectations. Currency dealers noted that even very disappoioting economic indicators were having little effect in the current climate of caution.

The market also paid no attention to comments by Thomas Berger, the deputy assistant U.S. $17.25 per barrel. Treasury secretary, who warned that a further decline in the dollar ly from 6.1020.

A T the start of 1986, the National Aeronau-tics and Space Administration was about to enter one of the most critical periods in the history of the U.S. space program — a year of sharply accelerated shuttle flights that would test the agency's public claims of a new era of routine and "operational" space flight.

At this very moment, reports the journalist Joseph J. Trento in "Prescription for Disaster," the agency's top officials weren't on speaking terms with one another. Administrator James Beggs, having just been indicted on federal fraud charges, was refusing to brief his succes-sor, the acting administrator William Graham. Graham in turn was cut off from the flow of key information by allies of Beggs who distrusted him. Internal turf fights were rampant and writes Trento, "morale was reaching its lowest ebb in the entire history of the space agency."

Is it any wonder that, in this bureancratic I for the swamp, warnings about critical defects in the shuttle's rocket joints were simply ignored? Or that, on the morning of Jan 28, 1986, the concerns of rocket cogineers about cold weather were never communicated to the NASA officials who approved the flight of Challenser? In the 12 ----

In the 12 months since the disaster, mountains of newspaper copy have been devoted to the reckless conduct of NASA in launching Challenger and the grave, if not irreparable, damage that has been done to the U.S. space program. Now two books -- one by Trento and another by Malcolm McConnell, "Challenger: A Major Malfunction" - trace the story back to its historical roots; the resulting picture is a to its instorical roots; the resulting picture is a profoundly depressing one. It has become something of a cliché to say that the last vestiges of the "can do" NASA of Apollo days dissolved in the smoke of Challenger. What has I not been fully grasped - but is crystal clear after reading these accounts - is just how low NASA had fallen well before the Challenger launch. Wracked by internal dissension and without any clearly defined goals, the NASA of the mid-1980s was a confused and rudderless ship, hopelessly addicted to public relations extravaganzas to maintain its faltering claim on the public's attention. Reading these pages, the one thought likely to run through readers' minds is wonder that disaster didn't strike earlier.

Trento's is the more ambitious, if somewhat more uneven, account. McConnell's version is a solidly researched, thoroughly documented study that limits itself to the events directly leading up to the shuttle accident itself.

It is worth noting how the high school social : , studies teacher Christa McAuliffe wound up 4 on the Challenger flight According to McCon-nell, the first "citizen in space" was supposed to be a journalist. But after Senator Walter Mondale began hammering sway on the edu-cation issue, the Reagan administration abruptly switched gears and announced that NASA would carry a teacher instead. This began the yearlong odyssey of McAnliffe, a story quaintly retold in Robert Hohler's book, "I Touch the Fature

McAuliffe was a bubbly, irrepressible personality who, during her brief fling in the public limelight, managed to rekindle much public enthusiasm for the space program. Hunter writes well, but too much is now known for this book to work. When McAuliffe cheerily tells Bryant Gumbel about her faith in the safety of the shuttle program or talks about her own vision of the future ("We'll have space post offices, space restaurants, space camps — space everything"), it is hard to get caught up ⁷ in her excitement. One is more likely to get angry at how little she knew and how much she was deceived.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches DALLAS --- Governor Bill Clements of Texas said Tuesday that he and other members of Southern Methodist University's board of governors in 1985 decided that illicit payments to SMU football players would continue.

The comments by Clements, who left his SMU post before taking office as governor last January, came at a news conference after The Dailas Times Herald newspaper reported Tuesday that be and other members of the university "power structure" had made the decision to honor commitments made to SMU players before the 1984 season while not offering such payments to new recruits. "We - with a capital we - we fund-raising job with the school, was interviewed in July hy the Houston law firm of Liddell, Sapp & Zivley. A letter from Zivley said the firm was paid about $43,000 for a threemonth probe, which was coded abruptly when school regents "de-cided that it would be in the best interest of the institution to suspend or terminate the investigation.

A memo written by the vice chairman of the Houston Intercollegiate Athletics Council, said there also were problems in the basketball program. Frank Terry, a Baytown investor, wrote the memo to Chester Binge, then chairman of the board of regents, in January 1986. "We are so naive if we don't admit we have also offered some illegal inducements to players," Terry wrote. "Some players are blackmailing assistants [coaches] and assistants are - at the minimum - implying the same to the head coach." The memo added: "We must decide if we want to exempt head coach from discipline if we are to correct the problem."

At that point, the memo mentioned basketball coach Guy Lewis. Lewis, who could not be reached for comment, announced his retirement Jan. 21, 1986, four days after Terry wrote to Binge.
